

A GREAT LAND JOURNEY

An English Traveler's Trip from London to New York.

TWO YEARS TO ACCOMPLISH IT.

Sixteen Thousand Miles to be Covered.
From Vancouver Across Bering Straits—Live Underground Most of the Time—Across Ice Hummocks.

An Englishman who has already done a lot of traveling in out-of-the-way lands has planned a novel journey, nothing less than that from New York to London—by land. At least, if not quite all the way by land, it will be made without the aid of any vessel, and that comes to the same thing.

Really, his trip begins at London, as well as ends there; but as he has to cross the Atlantic to this country in the ordinary way, by steamer, here the enterprise begins, and Mr. Harry De Windt—which is the adventurous person's name—will start on his long jaunt. He expects it to cost him £5000 and to take two years.

In talking to a representative of Black and White in London, Mr. De Windt said that last year, while in Siberia, he met Captain James Adair in command of an American sealing schooner. "In the evening we discussed my former journeys; and when conversation turned on what was the greatest land journey possible, he remarked: 'I have crossed Bering Straits seven times on the ice—for our purpose let us call that land—and if you could go from New York to London or Paris by that route you would perform about as long a journey as you could find.'

"The idea struck me as novel, and I asked: 'Can you show me the way?'
'Yes,' he replied, with alacrity, 'I will accompany you from Vancouver as far as Siberia, where you will feel quite at home, and then return.' We shook hands over the bargain and the thing was settled. That's how it came about.

"Captain Adair will join me at Vancouver and accompany me across the Bering Straits. My servant, Geo.
Harding, will join me at San Francisco, whither he will proceed by sea, taking with him all my stores and other impedimenta. Harding has been with me over twelve years, and traveled with me in Siberia in 1887 and 1890, and on my Peking-Calais journey. This will be my most prolonged, most hazardous trip. All the others are insignificant compared to it. I shall cover not less than 16,000 miles.

"As to my itinerary, as the journey has never been made in its entirety, the dates must be vague. I shall leave New York before the end of the winter and proceed slowly to Vancouver, where my expedition for the first difficult stage will be organized. It is to be under the direction of Capt. Adair, and number some thirty Indians and half-breeds, all well armed. The chief danger of attack will be met in Alaska, and more particularly at Cook's Inlet, where we shall be specially watchful. Once I get into Siberia I shall be in clover, as far as the natives are concerned, and I will have nothing to fear from the Tchukchul tribe, which is kind to travelers.

"I shall stay in Vancouver for three weeks and then go right away by the end of March. Leaving Sitka and passing Mount St. Elias, I shall penetrate the unknown portions of Alaska, and after reaching Nulato, 300 miles from the Prince of Wales Cape, (the most westerly point of America), nothing can possibly be heard of me for eight months—that is to say, until I have traversed Alaska, crossed the Bering Straits on the ice to East Cape (the most westerly point of Asia), and reached Yakoutsk, in Eastern Siberia—a distance of not less than 5000 miles.

"During a great portion of this section of the journey I shall have to live underground. The windstorms known as bouras will be a serious danger, because while they last there is a chance of the traveler being buried. The cold, too, will be terrible. I shall have four months of darkness at Anadyrsk, in Eastern Siberia, a point two months' journey from Bering Straits. I leave civilization at Sitka (British Columbia) and return to it at Irkoutsk, six months' journey from Bering Straits, and within 300 miles of the Chinese frontier.

"I shall cross the Bering Straits on dog sledges. This will take ten days or so, as the going is difficult, many of the ice hummocks being 300 to 400 feet in height. When I was in St. Petersburg the other day a French friend at the Russian Geographical Society told me that on this part of my journey I should meet M. Andree, who would by that time be crossing the Straits in his balloon, en route for the north pole. This may be possible, but that is all one can say on that score.

"The journey will cost £5000, and, if all goes well, I shall reach England in the autumn of 1897."

Why Not You?

When thousands of people are taking Hood's Sarsaparilla to overcome the weakness and languor which are

A Significant Departure.

With the departure of another year when a review is made of the condition of affairs, it is only right that some thought be given to the physical body which enables everyone to battle with life's problem and figure for themselves the profit or loss on the trial balance sheet. Though the bank account may be large and each one's material gain be great, it would not be surprising if it suddenly dawned upon many that good health has been greatly impoverished by the low condition of the blood. It is in this state that the lactic acid in the vital fluid attacks the fibrous tissues, particularly the joints, making known the local manifestations of rheumatism. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla the great blood purifier, a positive and permanent cure for rheumatism.

"Bill's tree!"
"Yas, Bill; he is the conductor, you know. The tree I was speak-in' of stood alongside the track about thirty mile up the road from here, and when the train come along and the shadder of the tree laid across the middle of the top rail of Buck Johnson's fence, Bill knowed he was on time and could gage her about to git here on schedule time. Now they cut it down and all Bill has to go by is his own guess. Company was talking some of puttin' up a pole in the place whar the tree uster be, but they hain't done it yit."
